

Student parents at USC often experience a lack of sufficient institutional resources and support systems, which makes it difficult to balance academic and parental responsibilities. As a result, many feel excluded from the campus community and disconnected from the student experience.